If you've ever sitting on the laptop or on the desktop and you are asked why you can't use all your fun browser extensions on your smartphone, you must be a chrome-plated user. Firefox fans were able to install extensions for the Android version of the browser for some time, but this ability is yet to come to the official version of chrome.instead, I recommend checking an alternative browser "based on chrome, course - You give you all the familiarity of Chrome with the bonus (just added) to be able to use the extensions with your mobile browser. I'm talking about kiwi browser, and here how to start the release support for extensions.first, install the Browser (which comes with the block of the integrated ad, if you need a small encouragement to move forward). While you had to fussus with options under the kiwi cap in previous versions of the app, the extension support is Integrated and enabled to the latest version I checked (Phi). When you load the new browser tab card, tap the Triple-Dot icon in the upper right corner. Search Â ¢ â,¬ Â "ExtensionSÂ ¢ â,¬ and touches the one. See a bit blah-blah-blah on a Â ¢ â,¬ Â "Kiwi Web Store", which is really just a hyperlink to good olÂ ¢ â,¬ â "¢ Chrome Web Store that should be familiar to anyone has installed an extension the desktop version of the browser. And, no, the site is not formatted for a mobile experience, as Google is assumed that you would never need to visit it to your smartphone. So the extensions you should try To use on kiwi, it is where the process gets a bit complicated. First of all, every single extension that I downloaded and installed initially jumped an error message that says you can't install, which doesn't seem to be accurate. More importantly, Not all extensions are guaranteed to work on your mobile browser. I discovered that most "tabby â,¬" extensions that I tried to incorporate completely failed, for example. And I could never get the rescue of the extension pocket to do here Anything, just pulling on a new blank page for my efforts. It was happy to see that the origin of Ublock worked perfectly, and this is around where my experiment is over ... for the more because I was tiring to tackle the desktop website for the web Store Chrome. As far away you want to get the Â ¢ â,¬ "rabbit hole. It works? Â, â,¬" with your Chrome furniture extensions depends on you. To find and access the extensions you have installed, you want to touch the Triple-Dot icon in the upper right corner of the kiwi browser and scroll to the end of the menu. You will find all your extensions there (the mobile equivalent of the icons in a toolbar, I suppose). The Chrome Web Store is a casino, of course, but that does not mean that you should not use legitimate extensions to improve your browser experience ¢ â,¬ "if this is on Google Chrome or the resource-friendly alternative, Microsoft ¢ â,¬ Â "¢ s Edge chromium.tempting as it could be to pack your browser full of each useful extension that you can get, that bit of Â ¢ â,¬ Â" resourcesÂ ¢ â,¬ was not alone My lame attempt to a joke: at some point, you will "want to be strategic about your selections, because you probably don't want to slow your browser to a gattonium. I feel like I had some extensions of too many extensions now, and promising that working on this article will convince me to remove a handful from my browser. He said, there are also some extensions that I think everyone should know everyone. They could be evident to you; They could be completely new. You have to start somewhere, which is why I plan to share extensions always use in the hope that you give you Gemme (or a filling suite) at try.if you have suggestions for another extension that would be defended at any cost, please leave in the comments! IME M Always looking for others, great extension, and would be more than happy with check it out and share it with your fellow lifehacker fansÂ ¢ if it's impressive s, start-up course.letÂ ¢ s here. Remember again on the day you To install annoying VNC applications on your computer if you want to call in your system from afar? He probably had to find a way to pierce through your home or office router if you wanted to move the mouse to a remote computer and type as if you were sitting in front of the screen. How many Account Dyndns do you think we all have realized over the years? Jumping back to day of the day, there is a single most useful extension for multiple devices owners than the chrome remote desktop. Install it on your various desktops or laptops, make sure that these systems are connected to your Google account, and set them as HostsÂ ¢ that really only involves clicking on a button or two and creating a PIN code. You can then use this site useful for accessing these systems, wherever they are, taking theyÂ ¢ king on. You can also use an Android or iOS app to unlikely touch the screen and pull up all the programs needed for launch.This is the extension that I use if I never voice out of town and needs to compose again in my desktop of Home for any price by turning it off when a download is completed or making sure Ia Ve loaded my favorite idlingtivity game (and set the monitor to power after a minute or down there). You could not use Chrome Remote Desktop every day, but youÂ ¢ LL being happy ITA s longer when you need it.You Dona t must use 1Password as a password manager. There are alternatives; This is precisely that I get blocked over the past few years. I love 1 chrome password extension, because simplifies access to the numerous login and passwords that I saved in the app over the years. This extension comes like a companion for the 1Password desktop app ", which you also need to install on your PC. Otherwise, you need the standalone 1Password X extension instead. If you use Gmail ¢ â,¬" Who does not use Gmail? Â, â,¬ "then Google Mail Checker is an extension of your browser. Install it and is a small icon in your main toolbar that tells you how many messages don't read Gmail you have. This is. Can't Change a single option, nor to change that counts in any way, so let this inspire you to get to box inbox zero. They are probably 50 different chrome extensions that you can use to customize your YouTube experience. I tried a group of They, and I find myself hate me for various reasons - they stop working, they are bulky, their ui is horrible, their settings are difficult to understand, feel scammers, et cetera. What I stuck with the last year and the change is improved for YouTube, as it satisfies most of the requests I have for an extension like this. It allows me to skip annoying YouTube ads; automatically makes the player to the largest theatrical mode every vol TA I look at a video; And it even makes the player a smaller in-picture display, so I can still watch the video when we stop down to read the insipid comments of YouTube; And it automatically defaults to the very high quality reproduction for any video. Its settings menu, even if a bit complicated, makes sense, and you can even use it to adjust the colors and the theme of YouTube, change the default playback speed and check the volume with the mouse wheel. Nice.i talked about this first, so I don't repeat too much. The link to the extension of the text fragment allows you to create your personalized anchor connections - Hypertext links that will direct a user of another Chrome user (or Bede Chromium) to an exact text bit on a website. It is incredibly useful , especially if you are a student, researcher or anyone else that may not want to lose a giant flow of text every time Look for a special passage. Oh yes. If you are tired of tackling the clutter of the tablet, exactly why I'm not showing you a screenshot of my complete browser right now ... you absolutely need oneetab. This extension is a productivity life preserver. With it, you can download all the cards open in a single list of cards that you can save within the of the Same or export to your .html file for custody. While I still recommend bookmarking sites, you know you would like to be around, Onetab helps you at least manage your daily nightmare (or weekly) much better and saves precious resources on your system, you too say Â ¢ â,¬ Â " Lifesaver? Â, â,¬ are random times when your browser crashes; It is the nature of the software. Usually you receive a warning to restore the cards you have previously opened. Sometimes, however, this process can go a little wrong, and you reality in reality for restoring anything. This leaves you the unpleasant task to cross your story to find a time when these cards have all been opened and you can make them again one by one again. Or, you can do what I do: Install session Buddy, simply click on one of the real-time backups of the cards and launch all the way it was before your browser. I can't count the number of times session Buddy saved your ass. For this reason, he sits at the top of my extension list of my browser. I never executed the numbers to see how much the great suspension makes your browser less than a CPU and a memory pig. On paper, the solid role extension: fundamentally supports any activity on the cards you are not actively using, restoring them with a click when you are ready to revisit them. I confess, this too has never been enough to make Chrome not turn my desktop computer into a reaction engine every time I used it, but every little bit helps, right? If you are going to make Jeff Bezos rider, the minimum you can do is to ensure that your Amazon purchases are slightly benefiting from some local charities in your area. With the smile always, your browser will always take to smile.Mazon instead of Amazon.com, which means that all purchases made will give a slight piece of cash to a selected charity. Do you become instal-millionaires? No, but my purchases in the last year or two have collected almost $ 100 for my favorite local charity. If 1,000 people did buy as much as me and everyone did the same thing, this is one hundred and thousands of extra dollars for absolutely nothing. And if ten thousand people used this extension ... anyway, install the smile always if you buy Amazon. It didn't cost you anything, and more people who do it, more charitable than free money get. As easy as that. I don't like being traced around the web, and you will go to great lengths to do my best - knowing that it is probably still useless ... to prevent scripts, biscuits and other bullshit from following me and learning everything I like.
