If a document is genuine of the autherized signature of the autherized signature certificate (DSC) becomes necessary. In India, it holds high importance as you can use it for online auctions, e-filing income tax returns (ITR), signing documents like PDFs, and more. It is admissible in a court of law as evidence and accepted by government agencies. In fact, it is compulsory for those who need to get their accounts audited for ITR filing and many others. Also, DSC does away with the need to send hard copies. This article covers all the major details you must know about DSC before using it. What Is Digital Signature Certificate? A digital signature certificate (DSC) is a key that is affixed to documents to certify and validate the identity of an individual or entity signing them. It contains the DSC applicant's name, country, pin code, email address, name of the certifying authority, and date of DSC issuance. It is the secure digital equivalent of physical certificates and is issued by designated certifying authority. You can use DSC certificate to sign documents digitally and validate online transactions. Classes/ Types of Digital Signature Certificates There are three types of digital signature certificates are as follows: Class 1 certificates: Individual/ private subscribers apply for this class of certificate. They serve as confirmation that the database of the certifying authority includes the applicant's name and email contact details. Class 2 certificates: They serve as confirmation that the database of the certifying authority on Jan 1, 2021. However, all the class 2 certificates purchased earlier will continue to be active and functional. They were issued to the signatory authorities/ director of companies for e-filing with the ROC. Class 3 certificates: Vendors who are planning to participate in online tenders should apply for this type of certificate for signing documents where proof of identity and integrity is required. Some of the sectors where it is used include: The government uses DSC for processing tax returns, managing legal documents, verifying business-to-government transactions, and more. Banks provide DSC as an additional option to ensure security during online transactions, and more. uses DSC signature for streamlining online processes in quality assurance (QA), sales, etc. Advocates and other legal professionals can file important documents related to court proceedings via an online portal, making DSC crucial for authentication. Benefits of Digital Signature Certificate Some of the major benefits of digital signature certificates online are: By replacing the hard copy of documents with digital PDF files, you can avoid the process of scanning the signed document for sharing it via email. Also, you do not have to physically go to the location to authorize or conduct a business if you have DSC. Data in the documents that are signed digitally remains secure as it cannot be edited or altered once the signing process is over. DSCs enable the government and other agencies to cross-check and verify transactions. It authenticates the personal information of the individual conducting business. Receivers can take relevant action based on digitally signed documents, as they know that the signer is not a fraud. IT Act, 2000 recognizes DSC as a statutory requirement for a valid digital signature. DSCs can be issued, suspended, or revoked by licensed certifying authorities (CAs) under the Controller of Certificate Authority, Ministry of Information Technology. By using digital signatures and DSC, you ensure the validity of digital documents and avoid the extra work of printing hardcopies. It is quite an eco-friendly move.
